CULTURAL INCLUSION PROGRAM

The Victoria Gold team is committed to helping facilitate the cultural awareness and inclusion of its employees and contractors at the Eagle Gold Mine site.

Earlier this year, Victoria Gold's Community Liaison, in partnership with the First Nation of Na-Cho Nyak Dun (FNNND), produced a series of posters featuring environmental and social themes in the First Nation's Northern Tutchone language, including a poster focused on Yukon wildlife.

The posters are distributed electronically to employees through site-wide communications and posted around the mine's facilities to help foster a greater understanding of FNNND's traditional territory, way of life, culture and language.

"Victoria Gold is proud to partner with the First Nation of Na-Cho Nyak Dun on this cultural inclusion initiative to help re-awaken the promotion and use of the Northern Tutchone language," says Victoria Gold President & CEO John McConnell.

In addition to this Northern Tutchone language initiative, in early 2015, Victoria Gold created a cultural awareness presentation: Cultural Awareness When Working Within the Traditional Territory of the First Nation of Na-Cho Nyak Dun. This presentation, the first of its kind in the Yukon, is delivered to all Company employees and contractors during their orientation at site. In 2020, the orientation presentation was updated to reflect the Eagle Gold Mine's journey to operations.

"It is very important to Victoria Gold to help our valued employees and contractors understand that they are working within the First Nation of Na-Cho Nyak Dun's traditional territory and to be respectful of the First Nation's lands, culture and environmental values," continues McConnell.

Victoria Gold has produced a series of posters featuring the Northern Tutchone culture and language, including Yukon wildlife.
