YUKON'S HISTORY AND FUTURE

YUKON AUTHOR AND HISTORIAN MICHAEL GATES' LATEST BOOK; Dublin Gulch: A History of the Eagle Gold Mine, released last Saturday, June 27, provides a fascinating glimpse into the evolution of the Eagle deposit from the late 19th century through to its development into the Yukon's largest gold mine and its first pour in September 2019.

The economic opportunities and benefits the mine can provide will benefit Na-Cho Nyak Dun citizens and Yukon governments, residents and communities for decades to come, however Victoria Gold President and CEO John McConnell always had a crystal-clear vision for another legacy of the Eagle Gold Mine; education and access to rewarding employment opportunities for Yukoners.

"Through our Victoria Gold Yukon Student Encouragement Society and its Every Student, Every Day initiative, we believe making school attendance a priority helps Yukon students achieve better grades, develop healthy life habits, avoid high-risk behaviours and have an improved chance of graduating from high school," says McConnell.

"By supporting increased student attendance through Every Student, Every Day, we are setting Yukon students up for a strong future. We are helping them feel more connected to their community, develop important social skills and friendships, and of course, be more likely to graduate from high school."

- JOHN McCONNELL | PRESIDENT & CEO, VICTORIA GOLD CORP.

Dublin Gulch: A History of the Eagle Gold Mine is available for purchase at site, in Whitehorse at Mac's Fireweed Books and Coles, in Dawson City at Maximillian's Gold Rush Emporium, via amazon.ca and in Mayo, at Bigway Foods.

We are pleased that Mayo Bigway Foods have agreed to partner with Victoria Gold and Every Student, Every Day, to arrange that proceeds of the book's sales at Bigway Foods in the Village of Mayo will go directly to supporting Every Student, Every Day student attendance programs in Mayo.
