LONG-TIME YUKONER JAMES LEECH started with Victoria Gold at the Eagle Gold Mine in May. As a Haul Truck Driver, he loves the opportunity to operate the largest haul trucks in the territory; the new Cat 785s. "My fellow employees are a pleasure to work with," says James. "My schedule at the Eagle Gold Mine allows me to spend a lot of quality time with my family and really enjoy the spectacular wilderness and wildlife here."

Kevin Fletcher is a Drill Operator originally from Alberta. "The best thing about my job is that there's always a demand for drillers," says Kevin. "I am loving what I do, the people I work with and the spectacular scenery at site."

Haul Truck Operator Kayla Wilks is a born and raised Yukoner and loves everything about her home territory. "Since I started with Victoria Gold at the Eagle Gold Mine this past June, I'm really enjoying meeting new people, the consistency of the work and my crew," says Kayla.

Blaster's Helper Joel Wynnyk is a Yukoner who started with the company at the mine in August. Like so many employees at the Eagle Gold Mine, he feels very fortunate to be working close to home. "I love the outdoors and that it's not so busy here in the Yukon as it is down South," says Joel. "In the summer, I like to hike and, in the winter, go snowboarding. I really enjoy that my job lets me be active and use my brain."

Damien Peacock is a Process Supervisor and in his role coordinates and supervises the mine's process operations and crew. "I get real satisfaction being part of a team that places top priority on safe, fulfilled employees," says Damien, also a Yukoner. "This is a world-class project and I'm very proud to help bring Eagle Gold Mine to its full potential."

50 per cent of the Eagle Gold Mine workforce are Yukoners, and Victoria is extremely proud of their contributions to bring the mine into production with its first gold pour on September 17, 2019.
